

HCM Blogspot!

News. Rants. Opinions.

8/28/2003 05:11:17 AM-

Alleged Author: hcm observer

Re: the Business 2.0 article. Two observations. It's good to see a major business publication recognize the labor shortage issue, especially with a cover story. When the main line media get the picture, there's a greater chance that the people who need to get the message will be more alert. Now, whether they'll do anything is another matter.

Second observation. The writer managed to put together his article without including key thought leaders like Sue Meisinger from SHRM or the authors of the book that started all this thinking and discussion: Roger Herman, Tom Olivo, and Joyce Gioia (Impending Crisis: Too Many Jobs, Too Few People). Granted, this is an IT magazine, but it's certainly a leadership and HR issue.

Still, it's a strong article that should be read...and put on the CEO's desk. Great tool for HR strategists.